THE FIGHTER—

I fight a battle every day
Against discouragement and fear;
Some foes stand always in my way,
The path ahead is never clear!
I must forever be on guard
Against the doubts that sulk along;
I get ahead by fighting hard,
But fighting keeps my spirit strong.

I hear the croakings of despair,
The dark predictions of the weak;
I find myself pursued by Care,
No matter what the end I seek.
My victories are small and few,
It matters not how hard I strive;
Each day the fight begins anew,
But fighting keeps my hopes alive.

My dreams are spoiled by circumstance,
My plans are wrecked by Fate or Luck;
Some hours, perhaps, will bring my chance,
But that great hour has never struck;

My progress has been slow and hard,
I've had to climb and crawl and swim,
Fighting for every stubborn yard,
But I have kept in fighting trim.

I have to fight my doubts away,
And be on guard against my fears;
The feeble croaking of Dismay
Has been familiar through the years;

My dearest plans keep going wrong,
Events combine to thwart my will,
But fighting keeps my spirit strong,
And I am undefeated still!

Must Spend 625 Hours in Study
Springfield, Ill., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Beauty culture students in Illinois must spend 625 hours in the study of their art, under a new curriculum for beauty culture schools, announced today by the state department of registration and education.

Only eighteen schools in the state have met the requirements of the new curriculum, the department records show. After January 1, 1927, no prospective beauty shop operator will be accredited unless he or she has met the requirements of the new curriculum. Rigid enforcement of the course of study by state inspectors, will affect the courses of approximately three hundred schools in Illinois, officials of the department said.

The new course of study, which is the minimum amount allowed by the state in granting certificates to practice beauty culture, includes the following subjects and the number of hours required:

Sanitation, consisting of sterilization and disinfection, 65 hours; hair dressing, including shampooing, marcel waving, permanent waving, curling, dyeing and bleaching, 290 hours; massage and applications, including a study of muscles, nerves, and circulation, cosmetics, make-up, and electric treatment, 100 hours; and demonstrations and examinations, 50 hours.

A special course on the manipulation of electric apparatus, was required by the department to eliminate accidents and shocks to be placed in effect were announced as follows:

"All students upon entering schools shall be required to register with the department as apprentice beauty culturists.

"Evidence must be furnished as to the responsibility, financial or otherwise, of the persons interested in the schools.

"A school shall issue but one form of graduation certificate and that only to a student who has finished the full course. No diploma shall be issued for completion of a portion of the work or for correspondence courses.

"A school shall not be conducted as a beauty parlor, and any person serving as a subject shall be first advised that the operator is a student only."

Danes Have Champion Watching Over Nation So Legend Says

Chicago, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Building of an archway facilitating entrance of visitors into the Shakespeare Garden at the foot of Belden Avenue in Lincoln Park has brought to light here a curious Danish tradition connected with "Hamlet's Castle."

The legend relating to the castle is told by Mrs. James Henriksen, a leading Danish resident of Chicago whose childhood home in Denmark was near to the castle of Elsinore, the gothic favorite of the place in Lincoln Park.

"Kronborg is the name of the Danish fortress at Elsinore where lies the real Hamlet whose history Shakespeare, in superb romantic fashion, has made the basis of perhaps the world's greatest drama. This drama gives far-reaching celebrity to the place but people who have in fact lived near the fortress believe that for centuries and still continuing at present, the fortress has been the constant abode of another prince of Denmark, Holger Danske, who is the country's ideal hero.

"If ever there should arise a crisis in which Denmark were to need his aid, the tradition says, Holger Danske, the champion of the Danes, will arouse himself from an age-long slumber at Kronborg, and will bring such glory to Denmark as to tell of it, might, would need another Shakespeare."

Beautiful Indian Maiden Rescued White Lover; Wed; Romance Began at Grand Detour

This section of the Rock River Valley is rich in romance of early days, days when Indians roamed where Grand Detour, Polo, Oregon and other Ogish county towns now stand. We wonder how many have read the story of how a beautiful Indian girl saved the life of a white trapper, almost within hearing distance of Polo. Later they married and from that reunion resulted one of the most interesting cultures in the state's early history. The story is about a lovable Indian girl, she was Ho-no-ne-gah, literally interpreted, "Radiant Eyes," daughter of a chief who lived at the little settlement now known to us as Grand Detour. The beauty of the river country meant much to the Indian tribes, but in the low-land lurked the scourge of fever which could not be fought by arrows, and the red man was afraid.

So Ho-no-ne-gah and her father prepared to go north and hunt a higher camping ground for their people. But their trip was delayed by a white trader, a young and handsome stranger, who fell, one day, at their tent, exhausted with fever.

He was Stephen Mack, a son of proud New England parents who had sent him into the frontier country to discipline him after he had left Dartmouth college.

With clever skill, the Indian princess nursed him back to consciousness and when his recovery was assured, she left with her father on the trip north. When he was fully recovered, Mack followed, overtaking them in an Indian camp in Bird's Grove, near what is now Harrison.

Casting his lot with his new friends he established a trading post at their camp and sold his furs to buyers from Chicago and Milwaukee. Day by day his gratitude to Ho-no-ne-gah grew to love, and she, in turn, loved the handsome white man.

One day, while Mack was on a trading trip, a band of Winnebagoes came to the grove camp and declared that Mack was a traitor who lived among the Indians but would not marry and should be killed.

Of whom graciously responded with enclosures. Mrs. Emma Robbins, Ward-en of the Rebekah State Assembly, spoke in her usual interesting manner of the coming session of the Rebekah State Assembly. The address of the evening was given by Mrs. H. A. Brooks, whose topic was "Woman's Place in the World," as suggested by Rebekah Odd Fellowship. His talk was greatly enjoyed. The hall was made beautiful for the occasion with cut flowers. All are justly proud of the I. O. O. F. hall which has been recently re-decorated.

Plans were made for attending a Pep Meeting of Dist. No. 8 at Ashton, the evening of October 8.

QUEEN HANDY WITH DUSTER
London.—(AP)—Queen Mary has proved literally that "The Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady" have much in common when it comes to managing a household.

For a time while King George was spending his shooting holiday in Scotland the Queen was busy at Sandringham House with a housemaid's duster getting it ready for his return.

"She cannot stand idly by while others work," a Sandringham attaché confided. "Each day she is at work, duster in hand, dealing with the pictures and other ornaments as they are taken from the walls."

Queen Alexandra would allow no thing to be changed at Sandringham during her lifetime as she wished the house to remain just as it was when King Edward made it over for her in 1862, a year before his marriage.

OLD DRESSES COLLECTED
Springfield, Ill.—(AP)—Wives and other relatives of Illinois governors have been asked to contribute one dress from their wardrobe, symbolical of the styles worn while living in the governor's mansion, to form a collection of fashions for the state historical museum.

It is the aim of Dr. A. R. Crook, director of the museum, to reconstruct the scenes at the governor's "dress parties," from the earliest times down to the present.

NEW FREER OPERA
Chicago.—(AP)—A pretty Alaskan legend, portrayed by a Chilkoot Maiden of Skagway, the flower city of Alaska, provided the theme for the new and third one-act opera of Eleanor Everest Freer, which has just been finished. Like her other works, "The Chilkoot Maiden" is in English in furtherance of Mrs. Freer's lifelong effort to establish opera in that language.

Several passages in the "Chilkoot Maiden" suggest the Indian music, but largely the score is from Mrs. Freer's own resources. A recent set of "modern dances" is the vehicle for a bevy of waitresses in an Alaskan dance hall, frequented by a party of young English and American surveyors.

One of these, Ralph, falls in love with Skagway, the beautiful young Alaskan girl, who has had a quarrel with her native sweetheart. The Thlingit tradition says that every time a white man crossed the summit of what is known now as White Pass, the warm breath of a Chilkoot wind melted the snow and caused a disastrous avalanche. The Chilkoot maiden warns her English sweetheart of this Indian tradition in time to save the party of white men, as she vanishes to rejoin her native companions.

Mrs. Freer believes it is the first Alaskan opera.

Nineteenth Wedding Anniversary Today

Last evening a company of guests, friends and relatives, to the number of thirty, gathered and proceeded to the Randall home where they found the family enjoying a quiet evening at home, and surprised them. The merry crowd took possession of the home and proceeded to celebrate the wedding anniversary of the host and hostess in a most enjoyable manner.

Music was a feature of the happy evening and games were enjoyed. Miss Dorothy Randall gave a number of instrumental solos. The guests brought with them delicious refreshments for the occasion. At the close of a most enjoyable evening all departed for their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Randall many happy returns of the day and leaving with them many handsome gifts in token of esteem.

NOT PROHIBITED
"Cocktail costumes" are the vogue in Paris and consist of a sleeveless frock of metal cloth or satin combined with a short velvet jacket in black, red, or any striking color.

PLEATED VELVET
A novelty this season is pleated velvet, but naturally only the softest of this material may be used this way.

Caracul is one of the most popular materials for trimmings—it is particularly liked in black on black broadcloth.

FOX COLLARS
The double fox collar, that is two fox furs joined in the back and forming long stole effects in front, is one of the most popular ways of finishing the neckline of both cloth and fur coats.

WINTER FROCKS
Chiffon and velvet are the most popular combination for winter after-noon frocks. Often the upper part of the frock is of chiffon and the skirt of velvet.

MODEST PATTERNS
Velvet this season is as apt to be figured as plain. Small floral patterns, or geometrical designs in bright colors on a dark round are especially liked.

FOR THE PURSE
The bright red envelope purse for winter is often adorned with black enamel or silver, and frequently with combinations of both.

FOR SATIN GOWNS
Double berthes of white or flesh-colored chiffon, with picot edges are very attractive on black satin or black velvet gowns.

CARDINALS ARE CHAMPIONS FOR THE FIRST TIME

Hornsby's Men Cinched Pennant by Winning from New York

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The long uphill fight for the St. Louis Cardinals to land a National League pennant for the Mound City is crowned with victory today and baseball multitudes that have watched the neck and neck struggle of the Cardinals and Cincinnati can now turn their attention to the possible world series winner.

The Cardinals clinched the flag yesterday beyond chance of loss by whipping the New York Giants 6-4 while the Reds dropped the first game of a double header with Philadelphia 9-2. The Reds won the second game 5-4 but the damage was done and for the first time in baseball history the Cardinals have fought their way into the world series.

St. Louis Celebrated
When word that the pennant was clinched reached St. Louis the city broke forth in the greatest celebration it has seen since the Armistice 1918. St. Louis fans, after 35 years of waiting, greeted the news with impromptu parades, the roaring of bombs, whistles and whatever noisemakers were available.

The St. Louis margin over Cincinnati today is three full games with but two to play. The anti-climax of the nerve breaking season will come on Sunday when Cincinnati plays a single game with the Cardinals in the last match of the year. The standings today:

National	Won	Lost	To Play	Pct.
St. Louis	89	63	2	.585
Cincinnati	86	66	2	.565

The St. Louis season trails off with one more game against the Giants before the Cincinnati contest. The Reds play Philadelphia again today. The Cardinals can lose both games while Cincinnati is taking two without endangering their leadership. The standing then would be:

Won	Lost	Pct.
St. Louis	89	.578
Cincinnati	88	.571

Cleveland Has Chance
While the Cardinals were deciding the issue in the National League, the New York Yankees crept to within a half breath of the American flag when the Cleveland Indians lost a close game to Philadelphia 3-1. Rain halted the Yank game with St. Louis but the half game added to the New York lead through the Indian defeat placed the Yanks two and one-half games in front with only four to play.

The standing:

Won	Lost	To Play	Pct.
New York	89	61	.593
Cleveland	87	64	.576

Cleveland still has a chance to grab the flag by winning the three games left on their schedule of the Yanks lose their four. The standing then would be:

Cleveland—won 90, lost 64, pct. .578.
New York—won 89, lost 65, pct. .571.

Pennant Races in a Nut Shell

NATIONAL LEAGUE

St. Louis Cardinals yesterday clinched their first National League pennant by defeating New York 6 to 4, while the Cincinnati Reds were dropping one game of their double header at Philadelphia.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York is in the lead, two and a half games ahead of Cleveland. New York has four games to play and Cleveland has three. If Cleveland wins all of its three games, New York will have to win two out of four to clinch the pennant. The final standing then would be:

New York	91	63	.591
Cleveland	90	64	.585

RED SLUGGERS IN LEAD IN HITTERS' RACE IN NATIONAL

Manush Holds Advanced Position in Johnson's Bunch

Chicago, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The closing games of the majors' season find two Cincinnati Reds in a neck and neck race for the 1926 individual championship of the National League.

Sunday's final efforts may juggle the official figures somewhat but well out in front are Bubbles Hargrave, veteran catcher, and Walter Christensen, St. Paul's Association outfielder who found a regular place in the Reds lineup when Bressler had to retire.

Christensen has had an excellent first year as a major regular and is in a fair way to finish with an average around .350, where he wound up the 1925 Association season with a .325 percentage. Hargrave is well ahead of his last year's performance, crowding .360 where he finished the previous season at an even .300.

Two Pirates are ahead at the run getting, averages released today and including Wednesday's games showing Cuyler and Waner to be the only two league players over the century mark in tallies. The veteran Cuyler has also unofficially captured the base stealing crown worn off last year by Max Carey.

Hack Leads Homers

Hack Wilson of the Cubs leads in home run slugging, with Bottomley of the Cardinals his nearest rival. Waner is ahead in triples and Bottomley leads the list of two-bagger specialists.

Kremer of Pittsburgh, shown by today's averages with 20 victories and five games lost, and Rhem, credited with 21 games won for St. Louis and seven defeats, lead the moundsmen. Root of Chicago and Dazzy Vance of Brooklyn are fighting for the year's strike out record.

Cincinnati tops the teams in batting, with a .291 average, the Cards are hitting four points behind and Pittsburgh is third with a .286 average.

Leading hitters in more than half the year's games: Christensen, Cincinnati, .368; Bressler, Cincinnati, .346; Hargrave, Cincinnati, .356; E. Smith, Pittsburgh, .344; Stephenson, Chicago, .338; Waner, Pittsburgh, .334; Brown, Boston, .324; Williams, Philadelphia, .333; L. Bell, St. Louis, .329; Leach, Philadelphia, .329.

Manush in American

The spurt under the wire in the American League leaves Manush awaiting only the approval of final official figures to move the American's individual batting crown from Harry Heilmann's locker in the Detroit clubhouse to his own.

Despite a current faltering in his stride, the Tiger outfielder bids to wind up the year with a slugging average around .375, and is well in the lead. Heilmann, who carried off the honors in 1925, ranks fourth among the regulars.

Babe Ruth, striving with virtually no chance of success to equal his world's record of 59 home runs, places just below Manush in hitting and is well out in front in run getting. Averages including Wednesday's games and released today credit him with 134 scores, but also show Golsin of the Senators, Mostil of Chicago, Gehrig of the Yankees, Combs of New York and McManus of St. Louis as having reached or passed the century mark.

Johnny Mostil of the White Sox has considerably better than a chance of retaining the league base stealing title. Ruth, of course, leads in home runs. Burns of Cleveland is safe with a new all time doubles total, and Gehrig leads in three base slugging.

Among the pitchers, today's averages show George Uhle with 26 games won and ten lost for Cleveland. His nearest rival is Herb Pennock of the Yankees, with a 21-12 record for the year. Lefty Grove of the Athletics is crowding a 200 strike-outs total.

Washington leads in club batting, with an average of .293. Detroit, Cleveland and the Yankees are all hitting .289.

Leading hitters playing in more than half the season's games: Manush, Detroit, .375; Ruth, New York, .368; Golsin, Washington, .360; Heilmann, Detroit, .360; Burns of Cleveland, .357; Fothergill, Detroit, .357; Collins of Chicago, .344; Falk, Chicago, .341; E. Rice, Washington, .340; Simmons, Philadelphia, .340; Cobb, Detroit, .340.

SIDELIGHTS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Uhle, star Indian pitcher, was the recipient of numerous gifts from the fans of Lakewood Ohio, who attended the game against the Athletics yesterday. Among the gifts was a watch and stick pin.

Lester Bell, who has been one of the big factors in the Cardinals lead, started the rally against the Giants. After the Giants had taken in three runs lead, Lester opened the second inning with a double. Toporcer, batting for Rhem, doubled sending in two runs to tie the count. Bill Southworth took some more sweet revenge against his former mates by socking out a homer which put St. Louis in front to remain and win the pennant.

One microphone will be placed in each of the parks of the world series contenders for broadcasting the baseball games. They will be in charge of the Broadcasting Company of America. Commissioner Landis said the reason for this was to conserve space. The company will furnish the service to as many broadcasting stations as facilities will permit.

Members of The Associated Press will be permitted to broadcast its reports of the games this fall as in the past, Commissioner Landis told The Associated Press.

EXPECT THRILLS A-PLenty THURS. AT CUBS' PARK

Walker and Callahan to Mix in Feature of Ring Show

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Mickey Walker and Shuffie Callahan will furnish more thrills in their ten round bout next Thursday night, at Cub's Park, than ever seen in a fight in the west. Walker, the cagey, hard-hitting and aggressive "toy bulldog" of the ring, arrived here today on the Broadway Limited. He looks the picture of condition and fitness. The former titleholder has been spending two months in the mountains and just completed a three week's session at Summit, N. J. He will box here for a few days and put the finishing touches to his preparation for the battle with Chicago's great slugger, Teddy Hayes, who trained Dempsey, accompanied Walker and will supervise his work from now until time for the bout with Callahan.

Shuffie continues to hammer his crew of sparring partners around the ring each day at Mullen's Gymnasium. This boy can hit as hard if not harder, than any man in the game. His punches remind the railbirds of the greatest of the old timers and as Callahan will enter the ring next Thursday night in better condition than at any time in his career, he stands an excellent chance of nailing Mr. Walker on the chin with disastrous effect.

Callahan will get a shot at Pete Latzo and the welter crown if he can trim Walker. Promoter Jim Mullen is already dickering with the champion to meet the winner.

The supporting card of bouts will show the greatest array of hitters ever seen in a western ring. Harry Dillon of Portland, Ore., the reigning sensation on the coast and the light heavyweight champion of Canada will meet Joe Woods, the Los Angeles 175 pounder in one of the feature tens.

Del Fontaine, the Canadian middle weight champion meets Joe Anderson of Cincinnati, a top notch fighter and a powerful puncher in a ten rounder at 158 pounds.

Chicago's great colored star, Volcott Langford, will meet the best in the game, Allentown Joe Gans, who just fought Tiger Flowers an even battle and who has met successfully such boys as Jack Delaney, Harry Greb, and in fact every middleweight of note in the business. It will be Langford's big chance and Barney Abel has promised the colored fans of Chicago a chance to do some cheering for he stated last night that his boy is ready and will win.

MANY SEEKING MATCHES WITH NEW CHAMPION

Tunney Under Contract With Rickard: May Meet Dempsey

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Challengers for the heavyweight crown already are clamoring for matches with Gene Tunney.

In Buenos Aires, Louis Firpo, who knocked Jack Dempsey from the ring, announces that he intends to start serious training. He wants to leave Buenos Aires in March to fight in Canada before meeting heavyweights here.

Tex Rickard is considering another match between the warriors of the acqui. "Jack has asked for a match and it may be put on next spring" Rickard says.

Two other candidates are Harry Person, champion of Sweden, who whipped Johnny Risko of Cleveland in his American debut and knocked out Jack Adams in one of the preliminaries Thursday, and Monte Munn, Nebraska wallpiper, who put Hughie Clements on the same card away. Both are mentioned as potential contenders by Rickard.

The new champion, under contract to fight the man Rickard selects, declares he is ready to meet anyone. Two Long Beach oil promoters have wired both Dempsey and Tunney offering a $750,000 purse for a return bout near Los Angeles in January.

The syndicate owning the Wembley Stadium near London has invited the champion and Dempsey to meet there Derby Day, early in June.

The Virgin Islands, acquired by the United States, have an area of 142 square miles and a population of 30,000.

CHAMPION CALLS ON JACK: CALLS HIM GOOD SPORT

Opponents of Thursday Night Spent Hour in Visiting

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Gene Tunney thinks Jack Dempsey is a "good sport." That's what the new heavyweight champion said today after making a courtesy call on his defeated adversary.

Tunney spent an hour as Dempsey's guest in the former champion's hotel suite.

Greeting his foe of the ring with an outstretched hand which he said was "a bit tender," Tunney expressed the hope that Dempsey was "coming along all right."

Dempsey thrust out his hand and told the new champion he was glad he had come.

"I always thought you were a great champion," said Tunney. "And I want to say now that you are a clean opponent and fought as game a fight as any man who has been in the ring. Any man can be proud to have met you in the fight you made."

Dempsey talked with a smile that made it difficult to believe that he had been in a desperate battle with his guest.

He assured his visitor that he would be over the effects of the fight in a few days.

Jack expressed concern over the effects of his closed eye, which he said was not healing as rapidly as he expected.

Tunney Leaves Scene of Victory for Home

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Waving farewell to a large crowd that wished him a long reign, Gene Tunney world's heavyweight champion left Philadelphia for New York today.

The taxicab that took the champion to the station had a narrow escape from accident. As it swung around City Hall Plaza, it skidded on the slippery street and almost struck a trolley car.

Against W. R. Gans who was riding with him, The champion smiled and said: "This is almost as fast as the Dempsey fight."

A thousand persons were attracted to the station by Tunney's arrival there, but he was quickly escorted through the gates. In the crowd were several scores of marines.

One of the soldiers seized Gene's hand and the champion squeezed it and said, "Atta boy, leatherneck, that's a fine uniform you have on."

"You helped it along a lot in the last few days," proudly replied the marine.

Tunney said he was anxious to meet his mother and hoped to be able to take her to Maine for a rest.

"I'm tired of the city and want to get out under the trees and chop wood," he said.

RECEIPTS BIG FIGHT GIVEN AS $1,895,733

Foreigners Heard Reports via Radio Last Night

Philadelphia, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The receipts from the Dempsey-Tunney championship bout last night were announced today as $1,895,733.

FOREIGN COMMENT

London, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Dempsey's defeat caused a sensation among the majority of sport followers here as most of the English boxing critics had indicated their conviction that Tunney could not beat the champion. A knockout by Dempsey in the first round or two would have surprised few of those who gathered around the tickers of London clubs at 2.30 o'clock this morning. Some papers printed late specials giving details, round by round.

Thousands of radio fans heard the description of the fight broadcast from the Philadelphia ringside. It was the first transatlantic broadcasting of such an event.

Paris, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Dempsey went the way of all champions who stay out of the ring several years. This was the general comment today of Parisian fight fans, the majority of whom stayed up all night to get the result of last night's fight.

Funeral of Amboy Woman Held Today

The funeral of Miss Katherine E. Murray, daughter of Mrs. and Mr. John Murray of Amboy, who died at their home Thursday morning, was held this morning at St. Patrick's Catholic church in that city, after which her body was laid to rest beside that of her mother in St. Patrick's cemetery, the Catholic Daughters of America, of which she was a member, assisting in the services at the grave.

Miss Murray was born in Cornwall, Conn., Feb. 16, 1892.

After the death of her mother who passed away at Cornwall, Conn., January 27, 1921, and whose remains were taken to Amboy for interment in the family lot in St. Patrick's Catholic cemetery, Miss Murray and her father went to Amboy to make their home, residing on Mason street.

She leaves to mourn her passing, her father, John Murray, and an uncle, John McElroy of Amboy, together with other near relatives and a host of warm friends, who sympathize with the family in this hour of affliction.

"You helped it along a lot in the last few days," proudly replied the marine.

Tunney said he was anxious to meet his mother and hoped to be able to take her to Maine for a rest.

"I'm tired of the city and want to get out under the trees and chop wood," he said.

ILL. UNIVERSITY ABLE TO REFUTE POISON STORIES

Cross Episode Proven Dud With Decided "Kick-Back"

"As many University officials and other thoughtful persons anticipated, the Cross episode has proved a dud. Not only that, but it is already having a decided kick-back."

This was the statement of Josef F. Wright, publicity director of the University of Illinois, in commenting on the charges of immorality in educational institutions which are made from time to time.

"It is a favorite occupation of many people who ought to know better," Mr. Wright said, "to make vituperative, highly colored statements about educational institutions. Usually arrangements are made beforehand to give such statements the widest possible publicity, and their rebuttal, no matter how strong and convincing is the proof, rarely overtakes the original statements. The retraction which the speaker or writer makes the day after the poison is spread, never resolves the attention given the broadside of invective."

able to stand attacks.

"Fortunately, the University of Illinois is able to withstand such attacks. However, it is the duty of the University, both to itself and to the cause of education in general to expose the system of those misguided individuals who would slander educational institutions and the youth of the nation in order to gain publicity or a few dollars for themselves. The simple truth is, that such speakers and writers are not ordinarily engaged in making honest criticism, but in seeking mention for themselves, undervaluing, if necessary, the humiliation of retraction for the wide circulation of their names."

"But sometimes the chickens come home to roost. Sometimes the falsehoods and overstatement boomerangs back to deal the author a harder blow than he had counted on. Such, I believe, will be the result in the latest cause of innuendo with which the University of Illinois had had to deal. The sober thought of the friends of American education is too fair, too honest to let go unchallenged and unreprieved this indictment of co-education. The upshot of the matter should be a lesson to those who in the future may feel tempted to boost their personal advantage at the cause of education."

"TRACKED BY THE POLICE," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
While he fights in rain-soaked France the thoughts of Private Jimmy Ford are as low as the weather. Among the things that have sustained him through the horrors of war are letters from his sweetheart, Ruth Allen. One of these letters is the cause of his misery, because it tells of the attention Dan Murtagh, a politician, pays her in Jimmy's absence. In his heartbreak he volunteers for a dangerous raid. A German war dog places her life to save his. Jimmy, in gratitude, adopts her puppy, smuggles it into Hoboken after the war and turns it over to his parents and sweetheart.

"I suppose you know all about mademoiselle and what they wear. I guess there were lots of mademoiselles!" Ruth remarked stiffly. Jimmy ignored that, but explained.
"We all got together one night in the rest camp after we were sent back from the trenches where I got Rinty. And the boys decided that the pup ought to have a name. So I suggested 'Spot.' But he ain't got no spots," said Bill Gee, you know, him that worked in Burns Drug Store. So another guy suggested 'Trancy.' Someone hit him with a G. I. can. Ike Schuman said 'Over There.' We threw him out of the tent. Imagine being reminded of things like that! Then a fellow said, 'Let's call him 'Made-moiselle Mudhole.' But he ain't that kind of a dog, and 'Monsieur' is no name for a respectable mutt. So that Taylor fellow—you know, the long drink, who wears glasses and was a reporter on the Press—said, 'He's such a droll looking little creature, just like a hairy toy, let's name him after those quaint amulets the French girls are wearing—Rin-Tin-Tin.' "Mickey Keenan got sore and said, 'This pup ain't no omelette—and if you call him after an omelette it means he's got yellow in him.' But the rest of us who ain't so dumb laughed Mickey down and thought Taylor's idea was a pretty good one. So there you are—"

Jimmy had to return to his outfit now. They were to go straight to Camp Dix, without leave, for quick demobilization. Several days, with luck, and he might be home. For good. He kissed Ruth and his mother and shook hands with Rinty, who moaned disconsolately and strained against the leash Ruth held, with the assistance of Mrs. Ford.

"I want to have a talk with you soon as I get back," said Jimmy gravely to Ruth as he left her, "and find out what the big idea is about this Murtagh fellow and what's between you."
"Oh, Jimmy, you silly boy!" Ruth's eyes were wide and startled. But her happiness at having him back more than offset any irritation aroused by his characteristically masculine stupidity about such matters. "There isn't a thing. He's just a friend—of my father. You know I love you." She clung to him a minute longer on account of that.
"I don't like this fellow Murtagh," confided Police Lieutenant Ford, Sr., to Jimmy as he strode part of the way with the lad to where K Company was enjoying one of its countless roll calls preparatory to marching for the trains that would bear them to Camp Dix. "I've been having a bit of trouble with him. He came to me and asked me to lay off rounding up some of the Hudson Busters. Said they were harmless, exuberant boys—friends of his. You know, Jimmy, they're a vicious lot. And that he'd be harder than ever to handle now when those of them who were in the draft get home and mustered out and return to their old ways. I don't know what was behind Murtagh's request—it was more of a warning—but I suspect he's hand in glove with them in some shady business. I'm trying to clean up Chelsea, but there's some mysterious underground power blocking me at every turn. I talk It's Murtagh. I haven't any dead-end evidence against him, but I've got good reason to have hunches. He's got rat eyes, and there's too much oil in his voice and salve in his manner. But he's powerful—both with the higher-ups and the lower-downs. I'll have to watch my step—"

Jimmy admired his father immensely. Loved him, even. The Police Lieutenant was a fine, strapping man—erect of carriage, square of chin, with flashing eyes and a flaming honesty as long as the summer's day. In all the Army Jimmy had not seen a Colonel or General he thought as fine and military looking as his father. Even Pershing—and Lord knows that man was as handsome and soldierly as they come. But Pershing had nothing on his father, thought Jimmy, whose greatest ambition in life was to be worthy to follow in his father's honored footsteps.

"Goodby, pop," said Jimmy, proudly noting that the Captain of K Company was giving the big, erect Police Lieutenant with respectful deference and coming up to shake hands with him.
"Goodby, son," said Ford, Sr., earnestly before turning to the Captain. "I've arranged things for you to take the first civil service examination for the Force that comes along. Your mother will be proud. Ruth will be proud—and I'll be proud." The father's steely eyes softened for a moment into wistfulness and he lingered over a final handshake and admonition: "Goodby, Jimmy. I've been so glad to see you again. Hurry home, boy, as soon as you can. Mother and Ruthie will be waiting for you."

One week later, when Jimmy got home at last to the little flat on Twenty-first Street, it was to keep sobbing, heart-wrenched vigil in the parlor beside the body of his father, who had been shot down in a night gunfight with persons unknown. The Hudson Busters were suspected, though forty-eight hours of police department netting and rounding up had not cracked through the mystery.

Next day, as Keenan, the undertaker, closed the coffin and shut the features of Police Lieutenant Ford, Sr., forever from the gaze of his loved ones, Young Jimmy Ford wailed a loud vow to get even with the Hudson Busters if it took him the whole of his life. He had always wanted to be on the Force; now he had a double incentive, vengeance added to ambition. He would consecrate his police career, with the help of his superior officers, to ferreting out the exterminating of that deadly band of thugs and murderers. Him alone against the many.

In the shadows at the side of the little room, so heavy with the odor of funeral flowers, stood the Hon. Dan B. Murtagh, whose face was masked in an immobile amnesia and hypocrisy, though his eyes flickered a little with enigmatic amusement at the anguished oath of the bereaved son.

CHAPTER 3
Rin-Tin-Tin, awakened by an animal instinct and a high and loyal sense of duty that combined to form a signal much more compelling than any artificial alarm such as an alarm clock, rose at six o'clock sharp of a clear morning from the cool, clean floor mat that served him for a bed in the tidy kitchen of the Ford flat on West Twenty-first Street, New York City. The saloon-bred levelness of a September dawn traced out the spick and span corners of the room with soft radiance. Rinty gravely yawned, then gingerly stepped off his mat. Next he indulged in what is the counterpart in every well-bred and self-respecting dog's life of a physically prideful human's morning shower bath; he shook himself efficiently and thoroughly, snarling at the tip of his tail, the "shake" convulsed his hips, snaked tortuously along his backbone, wriggled up the back of his neck and caused the hair to spring erect thereon, and snapped his head at the flash with a flourish that sent the last of the sleep flying from his eyes. Completely awake now, he grunted and began the final stage of his rising and setting up ceremony and exercise—a prodigious stretch of his magnificent adank body from toe to toe of its giant, shaggy, steel-limbed beauty. First, he flattened his long, keen muzzle down, and with a slightly backward pull, upon his outstretched front paws, leaving his rump high in the air and his brush tense. Smoothly then—the whole process from beginning to end was a flawless, flowing rhythm of effortless continuity and grace—he thrust his massive body up and forward over his forelegs, which now bore the brunt of his full hundred pounds; then shot his hind legs straight out behind him, the big muscles rippling like enpouched snakes under the clean tawny flesh of his inner flanks. Fit for a frolic or a fight—during the day's dangerous work ahead.

GOATS LIKE GUM
Glacier Park, Mont.—Rangers in the park have discovered that mountain goats like to chew spruce gum. The animals go down to timberline to feed and gnaw the drops of sap from the trunks of spruce trees. Observers saw an old Billy goat get gum in his whiskers and become more and more entangled as he tried to comb it out.

NEW MOTOR OIL
Paris—Chemists, seeking a substitute for castor oil, which has to be imported, have found a way to secure the oil from grape seeds. This is said to be of very high quality and suitable for airplane engines. Seven or eight gallons of oil are taken from the seeds in a ton of grapes.

SAINT and SINNER by Anne Austin 1926 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

CHERRY LANE, 18, a typical flapper, has a long list of admirers. One is CHESTER HART, a former beau of her sister, FAITH, the stay-at-home drudge for the Lane family.

Others are CHRIS WILEY, whom Cherry meets clandestinely; ALBERT ETTLESON, a traveling salesman, and BOB HATHAWAY, to whom Faith is also attracted, but who has eyes only for petite, copper-haired Cherry.

Faith's life is largely made up of getting JUNIOR, 21, and Cherry out of trouble and hiding their scrapes from their parents. Chester Hart brings GEORGE FRUIT, erstwhile artist, and son of one of the town's richest families, to call on Faith, and Pruitt admires Faith's tall, womanly body extraordinarily. While Cherry is at work the next day, Faith receives a great box of American Beauty roses from Pruitt, which astonishes and pleases her enormously, though her heart is already lost to Hathaway.

While AUNT HATTIE LANE, an acid-tongued, kind-hearted, but a little heartless, is helping Faith to make a new dress, the girl receives a telegram for Cherry, and hurries downtown to tell the girl, immensely worried at this evidence of an intrigue between Cherry and Albert Ettleson, who is evidently married.

She finds Cherry being made love to by her elderly employer, MR. CLUNY, and unbraids her. Cherry protests that Cluny means no harm, and lies about the meaning of Ettleson's telegram. When Cherry sees George Pruitt's roses she believes they are for her. When Pruitt telephones Faith to invite the two girls to a party at his home, Cherry is furious with Faith, and boasts that she can divert Pruitt's interest to herself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

It was after one o'clock that night when Bob Hathaway's low-slung sports roadster drew up into sleeping Myrtle street.

"Come in for just a wee little minute, Bob," Cherry pleaded prettily. "Someone's still up in the dining room," Cherry whispered, as they tiptoed into the dark living room. She snapped on the light in a heavily shaded floor lamp and then tiptoed to open the dining room door noiselessly.

"Why, Faith, you old darling, you're making my dress!" she whispered ecstatically. "Come on in, Bob. It's just Faith. Tuck up your hair, darling; it's simply licking your cheeks," she added to Faith, as she leaned over to kiss her.

"Faith's a silly old darling, to sit up half the night making me a party dress, isn't she?" Cherry flung her arms about her older sister's shoulders and laid her tousled copper-and-gold curls lovingly against Faith's disheveled dark head. The contrast between the vivid, glowing, happy face of the little beauty and the tired, strained, untidy Faith was startling, and Cherry knew it. "You must go right to bed, you sweet, tired thing!" Cherry's voice was coolly compassionate and tender.

"I can't go to bed yet," Faith said brusquely, for somehow the look of almost foolish fondness and admiration in Bob's eyes as they devoured Cherry hurt her intolerably.

"Isn't it perfectly adorable material, Bob?" Cherry snatched up a length of the chiffon and draped it deftly about her small body. "I bought a beautiful blue and orchid pattern for you, Bob. We're going to knock 'em dead at George Pruitt's party, aren't we, Faith?" But her eyes were laughing into Bob Hathaway's. "Oh, Faith, Bob's been in George Pruitt's studio party, too, isn't that heavenly? He's going stag, I wonder why! Oh, he's blushing, the adorable child!"

She laughed and seized his hand. "Come on now, big boy. We'll tiptoe into the kitchen, so as not to wake up my sweet old Muggsy and Daddy, and I'll give you a great, big, 'luscious chunk of gingerbread, if you'll be real good."

"I'm afraid there's not any left, Cherry," said Faith, who had seated herself and was again plying her swift needle. "Junior dashed in at eleven o'clock and before I knew what he was about, he'd dashed off again, with the cake box under his arm. He and Fay Allen ate it, sitting out in her car. I only made one pan, you know."

Cherry flushed painfully with anger and embarrassment. "The selfish pig!" she exclaimed, forgetting to keep her voice low. "Stuffing that terrible Fay Allen with our gingerbread! Fay Allen's that awfully fast high school girl that eloped with a high school boy last year," she explained rapidly to Bob Hathaway, in an effort to divert his mind from the fact that she had been caught in a fib about the gingerbread. "Their parents had the marriage annulled, you know, because they were both under age, and she's simply been town talk ever since. We're just scared stiff that she'll rope Junior in. I'm going to make Dad and Muggsy put their foot down—"

"Cherry!" Mr. Lane's voice, unusually loud and harsh, called abruptly from the bedroom across the hall. "What do you mean, coming in this time of night? What time is it, anyway?"

"Why, Dad," Cherry answered in a low, stricken voice. "Just because I told Dad a tiny little white fib. And Bob," she said, her tiny body wavering toward him, so close that a copper curl brushed his coat, "I wasn't fibbing about the gingerbread. Honest, I wasn't! I—I made up the recipe myself, and I used to bake it every Saturday, before I had to go to work—"

her voice trembled ever so slightly, "and now Faith, who stays at home, you know, makes it sometimes. But the family still calls it the Cherry-special gingerbread. Please don't be thinking bad old thoughts about poor little Cherry, Bob. I'm not perfect—"

"I think you are!" the man said in a low, thick voice. Then, surrendering completely to the vivid beauty of her, his arms went around the tiny body in a crushing embrace. Cherry raised her face, stood on tiptoe, to meet his first kiss.

"He kissed you, didn't he?" "Didn't he, though!" Cherry laid a flushed cheek against her flushed hands. "Oh boy! Some sheik!"
